SSS execs also got P46.2M in profit share

By Christine V. Espenra

FORMER top officials of the Social Security System (SSS) acquired not only per diem allowances and director's fees but also millions of pesos in profit share from a private bank when the pension fund has a substantial investment, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday said.

These SSS officials received profit share from Union Bank in addition to their earnings from sitting on the boards of a mining firm and a holding company where the SSS also has significant equity.

Lead just for instance, former SSS Chair Thelma Cordero pocketed P25.4 million in profit share from Union Bank, according to Sen. Franklin Drilon, chair of the Senate Finance Committee.

Drilon said the profit share was on top of the P1.56 million in per diem and other forms of

Outrage over delay of Ampatuan trial

De Lima: Defense lawyers obviously delaying trial

By Philip C. Tubessa and Mike Manalang

RELATIVES OF the 57 victims in the infamous Maguindanao massacre were in disgust as the long-awaited trial was postponed anew yesterday.

Quezon City Judge Jocelyn Solis Reyes announced at the end of the hearing hearing that she was "perpetually" granting the defense motion to postpone the trial of Andal Ampatuan Jr. and 195 concerned and protesting the hearing to delay it.

Confederate Haden, whose son Victor Haden of UNLV was among the civilians and media workers killed on Nov. 23, 2009, in Ampatuan, Maguindanao, had flown all the way from Missouri Oriental to listen to the testimony of the prosecution's first witness.

DOH says dengue now under control

By Christine G. Arellano in Manila and Allan Pineda Inquirer Information

EVEN IF more than 60,000 Filipinos have fallen ill to dengue in the last eight months and their number is expected to reach 60,000 by year-end, the government is optimistic of managing the problem, health officials said yesterday.

Health Secretary Enrique Oza declared at a briefing conducted in Malabon that the Department of Health (DOH) was "on top" of the dengue problem and that there was no epidemic of the mosquito-borne disease in the country.

"We would like to reassure you that, yes, we are at the peak, or going down the peak of the incidence of dengue. We are on top of it and the administration and the DOH are fully aware of what's going on, and we will extend all the help needed," he said.

Oza said he had discussed the matter with President Aquino, who is now committed to the government's resources to help battle the dis-

Education budget hiked to P175B

By Marshall P. Sordani

MALCOLM is preparing to increase the 2011 budget for education by $12.2 billion to FY11 billion over its 10-year agency and departments to ensure that, following Congress, the biggest allocation.

According to Budget Secretary Florence Abud, if Congress approves the proposed increase in the education budget, it will be the largest for the department in over a decade.

The increase is meant "to fill the gaps in the long term [by doing] research gaps that have pertained the delivery of quality education to poor students. It should lead to a turnaround."

Among the programs to be funded by the increased budget are the construction of 12,497 classrooms and the creation of 19,000 teaching positions. (Hedrick)

The Palace is holding Ummah and House leaders to promise they made that the budget it would be passed by next December.

And mid-year prisms are just the beginning of the year's budget. A key to the administration's plan to get that mid-estimate right is the first round of 2011.

He said the order against bringing in more funds is aimed at ensuring that the government expenditure framework is intact and that the budget is a balanced one.

Added from basic services is education and health. The programme is prioritising farm-to-market roads, post-harvest facilities and irrigation systems to improve the supply of food, as well as public services and facilities in various small movements of supplies.

Minority bucks automatic debt outlay

By Linda M. Bader et al.

THE HOUSE minority committee questioned the division of the oil receipts, which include $7.1 billion in automatic appropriations, including debt payments, in the 2011 budget submitted to the Senate.

At a housing symposium, Budget Secretary Floriano Alou said the move was intended to "personify" congressional action, noting that some state appropriations such as debt service and infrastructure still must, he already covered by separate laws and thus "good as dead."

Obama: US combat mission in Iraq over

WASHINGTON—President Barack Obama ended the US combat mission in Iraq, declaring an victory after seven years of bloodshed, and telling Americans that the world: "It is time to turn the page."

From the Oval Office on Tuesday, where George W. Bush first announced the invasion that would come to define his presidency, Obama addressed millions who were divided over the war in the country and around the world.

Formerly opposed to the war from the start, he said the United States "has paid a huge price" to give Iraqi the chance to shape their future.

In a telling sign of the domestic realities weighing on the United States and her new president, Obama turned much of the emphasis to a single war address in the first year of US administration.

He said the Iraq war had stopped America of doing much for its own people, and he called for an executive order to make sure at home to deal the debt and progress of anti-terrorism campaign.

The speech, lasting slightly less than 20 minutes, was only Obama's second address from the Oval Office. Obama looked directly into the TV camera, which played to 100 million in his daily, nightly phone and the US and presidential flag behind him, his voice was subdued.

Even as he refused to ignore the war's civilian casualties in the past American history, Obama is monitoring the conflict in Afghanistan. He pledged more that the United States would keep up the fight to clear the lastest one-hundred Vietnamese.

In Iraq, for all the feeling the war is not over, Obama's mission probably will die. The country is plagued by violence and political instability, and Iraqi struggle with constant shortages of electricity and water.

Obama is keeping up to 30,000 troops in Iraq for support and reconstruction training, and the last forces are out due to leave until the end of 2011, he said.

In the Commander in Chief's war to be stopped, Obama took pains to thank troops for their sacrifice but made clear he saw the mission more as a tribute to the nation's sacrifice as a whole.

Blair: I cried for Iraq war victims

LONDON—Tony Blair's long-awaited memoir says the former British prime minister wept for the first time—although he says he is not a religious man—when he thought about the political cost of the war.

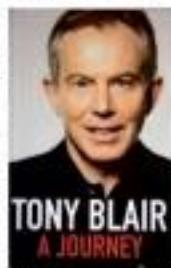

Blair's memoir, "A Journey," says he cried for the first time when he thought about the political cost of the war.

Sizzling stuffed squid

By Virginia Reyes-Reyes

IF YOU like squid—grilled, not fried or baked—then give this recipe a try. The versatility and broad appeal of squid make this dish a natural choice as week-end treat.

When grilling squid takes only a matter of minutes, you'll spend more time prepping the food than cooking. This means you'll want all your ingredients ready prior to heating the grill.

"Grilling Stuffed Squid is easy to do. It can be on the table in less than 20 minutes, and it explodes with flavor," says chef Lorenz Contreras of Galleo Grill. "You can use a wide range of ingredients for the stuffing so feel free to use your favorite food items." Grilling stuffed squid is one of the specialties at the restaurant's also known as www.galleogrill.com.

Seasoned tender squid is slowly cooked with chopped tomatoes, onions, garlic, cheese and squid heads, and then grilled to perfection. To make sure the squid remains tender and juicy, do not overcook. To eat the squid, be cautious, make a small slit on the thickest part of the squid. If the fat is still transparent, continue cooking for a minute

To save you from the trouble of removing the cartilage, in fact, instead, simply and ask at home, it's best to have your squid cleaned at the supermarket upon buying. Unlike cold running water, just wash the squid carefully inside and out, to get rid of any sand or other remaining tissues. Rinse inside to clean.

When grilling, simply grill the mixture inside the cavity with either a spoon or your fingers. Grill squid alone. Due to its delicate nature, be careful to keep the flesh from burning too fast while the inside is still cooking. Ingredients: 200g squid (cleaned), 25g onion, chopped, 25g tomato, chopped, 10g garlic, 20g ground cheese, 50g oil, 10g salt and 10g pepper. If you want, you can also add: 10g chili, sliced.
